

Research Integration Worksheet

It can be difficult to identify which pieces of your research fit with corresponding points in your speech. This guide should help you organize your research and integrate it into your points. This is available for download on the website so that you may type, rather than handwrite, this information.

THE FIRST AND MOST ESSENTIAL QUESTION YOU MUST ANSWER
WHAT are you trying to convince your audience to DO or BELIEVE?

Research Notes

In the following section, write your source names and their MAIN points. This is oversimplified for a reason – you should be able to break it down to this level.

Source 1:

Main point(s) to be found in here:

Is there a direct quote you may want to use? _____

Source 2:

Main point(s) to be found in here:

Is there a direct quote you may want to use? _____

Source 3:

Main point(s) to be found in here:

Is there a direct quote you may want to use? _____

Source 4:

Main point(s) to be found in here:

Is there a direct quote you may want to use? _____

Source 5:

Main point(s) to be found in here:

Is there a direct quote you may want to use? _____

Argument Content

In this section, you will lay out all the points you intend to use when convincing your audience. This does NOT need to be in order and it is NOT intended to be "exactly what you'll say." These are the building blocks of your overall speech.

Point 1

Main point:

Which piece of research will you use for support? (Not ALL points will have this).

How does that support your point?

Is there a direct quote you will use here? If so, whose and from where?

Appeal? (Ethos, logos or pathos? All three?)

How does this support your OVERALL argument?

Point 2

Main point:

Which piece of research will you use for support? (Not ALL points will have this).

How does that support your point?

Is there a direct quote you will use here? If so, whose and from where?

Appeal? (Ethos, logos or pathos? All three?)

How does this support your OVERALL argument?

Point 3

Main point:

Which piece of research will you use for support? (Not ALL points will have this).

How does that support your point?

Is there a direct quote you will use here? If so, whose and from where?

Appeal? (Ethos, logos or pathos? All three?)

How does this support your OVERALL argument?
